

Playboy Scout

Miami Ink + the Hard Rock = Bicoastal Charity

March 5, 2009

By Lena Katz

Awww! Who knew the dudes from Miami Ink were such softies? First they came out with Ruthless & Toothless, a clothing line for kiddies; and now they're inking up the Hard Rock Hotel San Diego in the name of charity. Well, to be accurate, they've painted a mural on large canvas in the hotel lobby, which is now being auctioned off for the Black Eyed Peas' Peapod Foundation. Proceeds will go toward feeding, housing, educating and providing medical care to needy children worldwide. Live painting took place at the Hard Rock on February 27th, and the artworks will be on auction throughout March. Go to the Hard Rock website, www.hardrockhotelsd.com to see what their work is like when not on a living, breathing canvas.

Tags: California, DO-gooders, Media, San Diego, Travel